I approached Pete about it, and he took a look for us, and he not only figured out what was wrong with the vendor code, but also designed a workaround for it, whilst we await the official vendor fix. This saved us from having to rollback the maintenance install, which had fixes for other outstanding issues. |

| Craig Roberts  |  | 29/05/2020 | Provide comments and examples of how our Values expectations have been demonstrated in decisions and interactions | Working closely with Peter on the SCOM Initiative, he is a testament to the Bankwest values. Through many design discussions and workshops, Peter would constantly challenge if a oath, feature or process was good enough ensuring we did what was right, and were accountable for what we've produced. If it wasn't easy and clear enough, we needed to re-do it. It needed to be "good enough" for use and had to provide a good level of service. He pursued excellence at every step. Another big value I sore with Peter, was he get's things done. Regardless of many challenges, time taken to teach and upskill others or personal challenges – he always found a way to get things done. Peter was the key on this initiative being done on time, and on budget. Without his dedication, work ethic and quality of service – it would have had a very different ending. |

The risk awareness and upfront questioning, but also working to find a better solution and not just saying “no” or “we can’t”. Working with team mates to upskill, guide and encourage development and completion of tasks. The sheer technical knowledge (or, to upskill and learn on the fly and keen attitude to do so) meant the team looked up, and respected Peter greatly. When Peter spoke, questioned and worked with people for different options – they listened, and took things onboard to better develop their knowledge and skills. |

|                |       |      | Provide comments and examples to support the Risk Assessment, consider how risk accountabilities have been managed in the role in line with the Risk Assessment guidelines | As mentioned above. Peter called out risks, concerns and generally questions things about the design, method, connectivity and more. On many occasions design's, process etc where updated to reflect a safer, more secure way to do things. The Risk In Change DORA, was in turn populated with more meaningful and actual risks and mitigations due to Peters contribution and speaking up. This made both team mates, and myself become more away and understand the potential risks and in turn the solutions. Peter took ownership and accountability throughout the project, and with the team through the duration. This, in turn resulted in the team looking up to Peter for guidance and support on their work and design. Peter picked apart the work required, broken it down and made it easier for the team to complete. Things that were too risky, or could not be done for various reasons were called out early and it allowed me to take action to resolve or get decisions made to progress without risk. |

| Barry Harwood  |  | 02/06/2020 | In your experience and interactions with me over the past few months, what behaviour(s), accountability or achievements have you observed? What impact did this have on you and/or other stakeholders? | Peter is the technical SME of the team and has a vast array of knowledge. Peter is an excellent mentor and has been instrumental in the migration from BMC to SCOM. Taken ownership of challenging technical decisions and provided options for issues that have arisen. This approach has meant that the target of migration of monitoring systems was fully met and savings achieved. |

As well as caring about the systems that are maintained by the team, Peter also regularly checks in on my personal well being and a great source of personal advice in terms of parenting for children with neurodiversity . Peter is committed to ensuring that the systems delivered are all fit for purpose and follow all guard rails. Peter is also committed to sharing this great knowledge with team members, especially to those learning like myself ensuring that as a team we deliver appropriate systems. This attitude and commitment ensures that if anything is not as it should be then Peter will speak up, not just voicing concern but offering solutions |

This is due to creating and maintaining systems that are within all guard rails, therefore ensuring they are within the risk appetite. This approach also covers ensuring all systems are tested for compliance with service continuity on time, as well as being designed to be high availability |

| Daniel Wearne  |  | 06/06/2025 | What have you observed me do to deliver great customer & strategic outcomes? | Peter has been a great assistance to me, in learning much about on-call support and server support / patching, and also assisting me with Ansible automation. He is always happy to help, and is always approachable, friendly and gets things done in a timely manner for any request i make of him! I enjoy working with Peter and consider him a good mentor, an asset to the business, friendly, efficient, with people like him making Bankwest a great place to work. |
